John and I became good friends at the Special Warfare School at Fort Bragg, North Carolina in early 1968. We became even better friends while 21 days on the ocean together going to Vietnam in a troop carrier. He and I ended up doing exactly the same job, but for different infantry divisions. I went to the memorial services we had for him in Vietnam. I have often thought about John over the past 32 years, and I truly cherish the time we spent together, short as it was. I had great admiration for him and his intellect and civility. In the middle of all that we were going through, I can honestly say that Johnny Miller was one of the truly nicest human beings I have ever met, before or since. I know that God must have a special place for this special person.
